A New Subject. Don't Start Lost.

Eng. Mahmoud Essam: post and design for a programming course

Programming is a brand-new subject... and the start really isn't easy.

You open the first lesson... You read the first line... and then you close the book.

Feel like everyone around you gets it except you? Every time you say: I'll start today... and you find yourself not knowing where to begin.

One lesson after another... one delay after another... until you start to feel the subject has slipped away from you.

But if you're lost because the subject is still new to you... that's normal. Don't worry.

You need someone to start with you from zero, and walk with you step by step until the exam.

With Eng. Mahmoud Essam, you'll start the subject without getting lost.

You'll understand what the question wants from you, organize your thoughts, know how to write the right answer, and practice until the idea sticks.

And if something stops you? You won't be left stuck on your own. You'll get follow-up and support until you truly understand it.

Programming is a new subject... and you shouldn't start it lost.

Start right, from the beginning.
